Intimate Partner Violence Workshop for Mental & Behavioral Health Professionals

Tuesday, October 29th • 8:30 am to 5:00 pm
Hillside Training Center • 1 Mustard Street • Rochester, NY 14609

Abstract

For decades, Intimate Partner Violence (IPV), often referred to as Domestic Violence, has been considered the purview of criminal justice; but since the late 1990s the CDC and World Health Organization have categorized IPV as a public health crisis with significant correlates to mental and behavioral health, substance abuse, and trauma. The purpose of this workshop is to promote greater awareness and understanding of IPV, as well as its prevalence and intersectionality with behavioral and mental health; and to empower providers to assess for and respond to it when indicated.

Mental health, behavioral health, and substance abuse counselors are truly the front-line for many IPV victims and perpetrators. Following the workshop, attendees will be able to identify indications of IPV, engage with clients in an informed, compassionate and trauma-informed way, assist with safety planning and, as needed, provide informed referrals.

Who should attend?

Social Workers • Mental Health Counselors
Substance Abuse Counselors • Psychologists
Marriage & Family Therapists • Psychiatrists
Art Therapists • Clergy • Nurses
Community Health Advocates • Victim's Advocates
Probation Personnel • Parole/Re-entry Employees

Learning Objectives

- Participants will learn about the prevalence, impact and dynamics of IPV victimization and perpetration.
- Participants will learn about common mental, behavioral, substance abuse and trauma correlates that are consistent with current or previous IPV exposure.
- Participants will learn how to apply trauma-informed methods when responding to patients affected by IPV; including how to avoid vicarious trauma and the importance of provider self-care.
- Participants will learn how to manage confidentiality, how to document IPV related issues, and how provider collaboration can lead to improved client outcomes.
- Participants will receive guidelines and information about safety planning, local IPV resources, legal remedies and other supports available for IPV victims and perpetrators.
